

Pretty Schemes for Lawn Fetes During Month of June

NOVEL ENTERTAINMENTS PLANNED FOR JUNE LAWN FETES

Suggestions for Charity Bazaars or Private Garden Parties In and Out of Town.

Though we may seem to be nothing novel under the sun in the way of charity entertainment, our English cousins who are much given to out-of-town fetes suggest some interesting features adaptable for garden parties.

Bazaars and sales of work in the open air can be enlivened by varied competitions and little entertainments of a novel character. The travelling open-air show will be found a simple and most amusing way of making money. A field or paddock, two or three decorated carts, a clever showman and performers prepared to represent certain characters, etc., are all that is necessary.

Bird's nests, real or artificial, containing prizes, and to be hunted for in the trees or shrubbery are quite new conceits for the grab-bag substitute. Old, deserted nests taken down, dried, and kept for the purpose can be made to conceal a dainty trifle for the girl, something also for the successful masculine finder; it is far better than they should explore and hunt in combs. Sweeps are quite popular inclosures, bonbon cases or silver paper. Now, the finding of these nests will make even the correct Oxford young man quite pleasantly boyish. Most certainly, if you tell them about such a competition, a forcible word of three letters, beginning with R, may be their spoken or unspoken comment, but set them to do it, and they will before long remember the far-away days of their youth! It is possible to develop this suggestion in many ways. Clever fingers can plait grass and rush, interlace twigs and fine with moss, so as to make a most presentable imitation of wren nests, setting in these eggs of marzipan, daintily colored or dyed.

If grown-up people play "finding" games indoors, why should not they be even more amusing out of doors? They most certainly are. You get the much-to-be-desired friendliness and the loosening of tongues which is not always obtainable to order.

A bunch of very good artificial flowers may be displayed, scraps of paper and pencil distributed to couples who intend to compete together. They are told that similar specimens are to be found in different places in the garden, apparently growing; they must be placed in beds or corners that can be easily described. It will be found that the lady has to do the writing usually, while the man offers advice.

Paris Patterns

No. 1956.

Ladies' Three-Piece Skirt.

With Long Sweep and Having Flounce in Tulle Style.

All Seams Allowed.

For a separate skirt where a train is desired this model presents especially desirable characteristics. It is an admirable model for peau de soie, crepe de chine, liberty satin, messaline taffeta, or any of the summer silks.

The pattern is in six sizes—22 to 32 inches, waist measure. For 28 waist the skirt needs 3 1/2 yards of goods 20 inches wide, or 5 1/2 yards 26 inches wide, or 4 1/2 yards 42 inches wide, or 3 1/2 yards 48 inches wide; 3 1/2 yards of insertion to trim.

To obtain this pattern or any of the others heretofore described in The Times, fill out the following coupon and inclose it with 10 cents in an envelope addressed to the Fashion Editor, The Washington Times, Munsey Building, Washington, D. C.

Glove Handkerchiefs

The glove handkerchiefs are very small, and are edged with lace. They are tiny enough to tuck in the glove, and most elaborate in design. A bride whose penchant is pretty handkerchiefs has nearly 100, all worked in various ways. They are of lawn, lace, pongee, silk, and cotton. And they are in all colors and in many kinds of stripes and plaids. They are in three sizes, the tiny glove mouchoir, the handkerchief for the drawing room, and the larger one for the street gown.

Fashion Favors Yellow

Sulphur is the particular shade of yellow that is to the fore now in Paris, according to the Drapers' Record, and London is sharing the predilection.

An inquiry at a leading wall paper emporium makes the fact clear that not only in dress, but in house decoration yellow is to be the popular shade this year. It is twenty years since there was a general demand for old gold drawing room papers and draperies.

Lilac Lure

Last night I sat and read alone,
With windows wide to the sea,
And my dead poet's loves and dreams
Lived and companioned me;
Below the wave creoned, for my peace,
A murmuring melody.

And pain had reached a timeless time,
Slumberous and passionless;
A wiser heart, methought, had lulled
To sleep the old distress;
It seemed, at last, my lonely soul
Accepted loneliness.

Then scent of lilac floated in,
Sweet from the springtime rain,
O fragrant lure! that roused the love
That safe asleep had lain;
Here was the old, mad heart once more
Awake, and wild again.

SIGNED "SINCERE?"

The following advertisement appears in a fashionable English newspaper: "Lonely lady wishes to exchange scandal with another; replies only from those in the best society," etc.

Gown of Cotton Voile, Trimmed With Black Taffeta.

The model shown in the sketch was decidedly smart in effect, and could be copied at small expense. The original gown was of pink and white-striped cotton voile, the surplice bodice being worn over a deep yoke and undersleeves of white wash net and lace. The upper part of the yoke was formed of a heavy medallion of Valenciennes in combination with cluny, below this being frills of Valenciennes. Cluny beading, threaded with black velvet ribbon, was used down the middle of the yoke. The sleeves were of net, with Valenciennes frills set on in points. The bodice was trimmed with bands of black taffeta, bands of taffeta also trimming the bottom of the skirt. Black silk embroidered rings, the centers filled in with spider-web stitches, were also used on the bodice, as illustrated.

How to Launder Silk

To launder silk successfully make a lather of a white soap and water that is merely warm; hot water will yellow silk. Immerse the silk and rub it well with the hands.

Squeeze and rinse in water of the same temperature to which a little blue and a little turpentine have been added. Squeeze again and rinse in rather cool water to which alcohol has been added in proportion of one tablespoonful to a quart of water. This imparts the sheen and finish found on new silk. Squeeze and shake each piece well and roll up in a clean sheet till ready to press. Iron with a moderately hot iron while the silk is still damp.

Beyond Burbanks' Skill

But even the splendid skill and science of Luther Burbank are set at naught when it comes to making the Easter bonnet a hardy perennial.—Puck.

Paris Jeweler's Artificial Gems

A jeweler in Paris has discovered a process by which he is able to melt down small rubies and sapphires of little value so as to produce large stones, which, when cut, can hardly be distinguished from the natural gems.

The only difference between the artificial and the natural stones is that the "silk," or grain, is cloudy in the "constructed" gems. Pawnbrokers have been deceived by the new artificial gems, and have advanced sums upon them far in excess of their value.—St. James' Gazette.

THE WORLD'S BIRTH RATE.

The population of the globe is 1,400,000,000, of whom 35,214,000 die every year. The births amount to 35,732,000 every year, or more than one a second.

Household Helps

If a tablespoonful of peroxide is placed in two tablespoonfuls of water—and used as a gargle, it will prove an excellent remedy for tonsillitis. About ten drops of peroxide in a half glass of water used to clean the teeth will remove tartar and harden the gums. A few drops of peroxide put on an open wound immediately will take out the poison. The wound should be bathed every day in water to which a few drops of the peroxide have been added, and it will heal very quickly.

For young trees and shrubs this is a Western idea that the East may well adopt. Set an elbow pipe beside the newly planted thing so that the top may be level with the ground and the crook bend in directly to the roots. Then water your tree through the pipe; every drop will go where it will do the most good.

To remove machine oil, wash in cold water and ivory soap.

The Care of the Piano

A piano is as sensitive to cold and heat as an invalid, so it must not be put too near a fire, or the wood is drawn by the heat. Never leave it near an open window if it is raining, or this will rust the wires and mangle the inside. Such an instrument should not be put too close to a wall, or the sound will be deadened, and it should be kept closed when not in use. The keys should be dusted daily with an old silk handkerchief, says Woman's Life. If they become yellow from neglect, rub them with lemon juice and a little whiting. Do not let the dust fall between the keys.

Feminine Attire

The toilet of woman never, even in its most obvious details, comes within the understanding of man. He may admire, appreciate, or adore a woman's dress, but he never for a moment understands it. Few, indeed, are the mysteries which this age of advertisement has left to us, but the time happily is not yet when the ordinary plain man can gauge fine distinctions of chiffon or crepe de chine.

Tramp's Strange Prophecy

A tramp admitted to Semlin Hospital (Hungary) declared that he would die the same evening at 7 o'clock. The doctor's examination revealed no sign of disease, but the tramp died, nevertheless, at the hour he had foretold.—Home Chat.

Drawing Room Kennels

The latest item of luxury in the outfit of the pet dog is the pagoda kennel, to which Fifi wends his way when he is wearied by his mistress' protestations of affection or an overdose of bonbons.

The glorified kennel is placed in the coziest corner of the drawing room, close to the fire. It is a habitation built of lightweight wickerwork or wire, smothered under frills of mousseline de soie and real lace, or arranged in frothy Valenciennes flounces, and on the topmost tier of these decorations is poised an enormous bow of pure white satin ribbon, into which is tucked a spray of white heather.

The inside of the pagoda is luxuriously lined with white lambs' wool, and a white satin cushion awaits Fifi's tired little body, while near it are placed one or two of his favorite toys—the ball he delights to worry on the floor and the tinkling little bell his paw may fancy to engage in assault pendant from the roof. The color of the mousseline used is controlled by that of the upholstery of the apartment in which the kennel is kept and of the little dog's coat.—London Mail.

Rhubarb and Orange Jelly

Rhubarb and Orange Peel Jelly.—Cut a pound and a half of rhubarb into pieces an inch in length, sprinkle over them a cupful and a half of sugar and about a quarter of a cupful of candied orange peel cut into tiny bits, and also a little hot water. Cook directly over the fire or cover and bake until the rhubarb is tender. For three cupfuls of this soften one-third a package of gelatin in one-third a cupful of cold water; when well softened turn into the hot rhubarb. Harden in a mold. Serve with thin cream, flavored and whipped with an egg-beater. Garnish with figures of candied orange peel. Cook the peel in sugar and water, if it is necessary to soften it.

Rejuvenating Velvet

If you wish to make your own panne velvet, first dip your velvet in cold water, getting every part of it thoroughly wet, but be very careful not to crush it. Shake the water out with the nap held down. While wet put the face of the velvet on a cloth and iron on wrong side, ironing in one direction. Turn and iron once with the nap through the cloth and on the right side. Remove cloth and iron once with rather a hot iron on right side. Iron with the nap, pressing hard. This is a very successful method. If in doubt just try a bit of old velvet first.
